

Give a Goat to a Family in West Africa

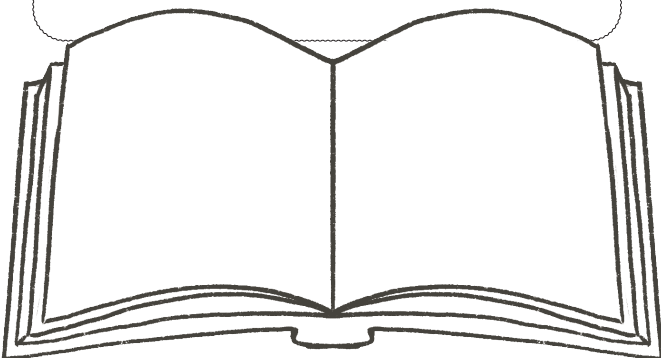

What sound does a goat make? Is it called bleating or baaing? A pastor in West Africa had a great idea: why not give female goats to single mothers, so they can provide food for their children. And when those goats have babies, the baby goats can be donated back to the program, so that more women can join. It's sort of like a goat club! This is a great way for a family in need to strengthen their communities. As people are being empowered to support their families, they are also receiving God's love through God's people.

One New Book for the Library in Mexico

Do you have a favourite book?

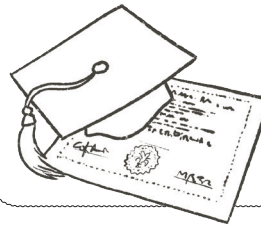

With your parents permission, trade favourite books with your friends! Maybe a book they like will become one you like too!

gifts that multiply

Coloring & Activity Sheet

Give Two Weeks of Tutoring to a High Schooler in Thailand

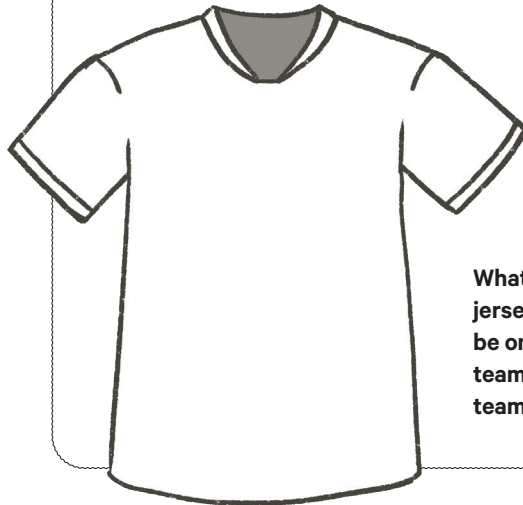

Do you like riddles? See if you can figure these out. Answers are on the bottom of this page, but no peeking!

Riddle 1: When Sud was 6, his sister Nan was half his age. If Sud turned 40 today, how old would Nan be?

Riddle 2: What belongs to you but is used more by your friends?

Give a Soccer Uniform to a Kid in Mexico

What's your dream sports jersey look like? It could be one from your favourite team, or maybe a dream team of your own!

Did you know that Horseshoe Crabs are actually not related to the crab at all, but to scorpions? They have fourteen legs, nine eyes, and look like flying saucers! Horseshoe Crabs are a popular picnic food in Thailand, but they are also a vulnerable species in danger of being wiped out. Breeding them will help increase their numbers, as well as provide a valuable source of income for church workers who are sharing the Gospel.

Buy Two Horseshoe Crabs in Thailand

